Forecast For London & Southeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 16 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Sunday, bright start, heavy showers, locally thundery. Gusty coastal winds.

Today:
Bright or sunny spells at first but occasional heavy showers developing through the morning, these becoming locally thundery by afternoon, and persisting into the evening. Some gusty winds along the south coast, especially in or near showers. Maximum temperature 17 deg C (63 deg F).

Tonight:
Evening showers will slowly decay overnight to leave mostly dry conditions by the early hours of Monday morning, with variable cloud amounts. Minimum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Monday:
Sunny spells but occasional heavy showers developing by afternoon, these locally thundery. The showers then slowly decay through the evening. Winds generally light. Maximum temperature 17 deg C (63 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Tuesday and Wednesday, sunny spells and further showers, still locally heavy at first but lighter and more isolated by Wednesday. Thursday, bright morning but cloud, rain, freshening winds likely later.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.